

LOCAL RESTAURANT WELCOMES PUKKA GUESTS

A local restaurant received some high profile guests in recent weeks, with an A-list comedian and top class chef both gracing the establishment with their presence.

Star of BBC comedies The Office and Extras, Ricky Gervais popped into 3 Green Restaurant in Elstree when in the area recently.

It is believed he had been visiting the nearby Elstree Studios and popped in for a quick coffee, chatting to customers and signing autographs while he waited.

Caroline Whitney, owner of 3 Greens, said that Gervais was "very polite," but stated that she and her staff treat any celebrities who dine with them like anyone else.

She told My Bushey News: "Ricky was very polite and was happy to pose for pictures and sign autographs for customers.

"We even had a few Americans in at the time and they thought it was a hoot because his shows have done so well over there."

Gervais was not the only high profile celeb to grace the Elstree restaurant, with cheeky chappy chef Jamie Oliver popping in for a bacon sarnie.

The popular chef, who has been seen on our television screens for a number of years and has his own iPhone application, popped in for breakfast with his crew. Again, it is believed he had been at the nearby Elstree Studios.

Caroline said: "Jamie was much like same as Ricky, polite and friendly, but we as staff do not aim to treat celebrities differently to any other customer.

"They expect the same service as everyone else, so that is what we do. It's nice to have these people come through the door, but we never harass them or ask for photos."
